

15 ways to use a dynamic QR

1. On a standard paper business card — print the QR once and change the destination later (LinkedIn, WhatsApp, booking page, offer page, website, etc.) without reprinting cards.
2. On event or conference badges — use the same QR before, during, and after an event by changing the destination (profile, presentation, follow-up page, booking link, offer).
3. On flyers and leaflets — print materials in advance and update the QR destination later for new campaigns, forms, promotions, or landing pages.
4. On posters, shop windows, and signs — let people scan after hours and reach your booking page, contact page, current offer, or support info.
5. On reception desks, counters, or meeting tables — provide fast access to contact details, vCard, portfolio, pricing, or booking links without exchanging physical cards.
6. In proposals, presentations, and PDFs — keep one QR in the document and update the destination over time (demo, case study, request form, current commercial offer).
7. In e-mail signatures (QR image + link) — give clients a quick mobile path to contact, booking, your current offer, or a dedicated landing page.
8. For sales teams (separate manager links) — assign separate QR redirects to individual managers and track lead/sale performance in your own website analytics or CRM (via separate destinations, landing pages, or UTM routing).
9. For different offers or campaigns — create separate managed QR redirects for different products, services, promotions, or seasonal offers instead of sending all traffic to one page.
10. On POS materials and price tags — connect offline product displays to product details, consultations, support pages, or order options at the moment of interest.
11. On equipment, tools, or physical objects — link to setup instructions, service contacts, quick guides, or internal usage notes.
12. On packaging (when it adds real value) — use QR for instructions, care guidance, warranty/support, reorder links, bonus content, or product story pages rather than just linking to a homepage.
13. For rentals, spaces, or properties — place a QR on a door/object and route to booking, access rules, contact details, or FAQ.
14. In printed portfolios, catalogs, or price lists — keep printed materials usable longer by updating linked case studies, project pages, prices, or contact destinations later.
15. As a gift with a changing message (digital-only or later with a physical item) — use a QR that points to a personal message, video, invitation, memory page, or evolving notes, and update the destination anytime (even daily).
